

STOLEN $25,000 COAT OF SABLE IS RECOVERED

Beautiful Fur Garment Returns as Mysteriously as It Disappeared.

A Russian sable coat valued at $25,000, stolen last November from a messenger who was taking it from Balch, Price & Co.'s office in Brooklyn to the home of Mrs. Charles A. Moore of No. 20 Fifth avenue, Manhattan, has been recovered. It is said the regaining of the rich fur garment followed the payment of $5,000 to an agent. Representatives of the Brooklyn firm will neither deny or confirm that report.

Mrs. Moore is the wife of the president of Manning, Maxwell & Moore, machinery manufacturers, of No. 85 Liberty street. Mr. Moore was at one time President of the Montauk Club in Brooklyn and lived with his wife on the Park Slope in that borough for nearly twenty years.

In the latter part of last November Mrs. Moore, who is known for her handsome apparel, decided to purchase a sable coat—a princely affair—to be one of the handiwork in New York. The order was placed with Balch, Price & Co., at No. 276 Fulton street, Brooklyn.

The costly coat was to be delivered a few days later, but it failed to reach the Moore home in Fifth avenue on the day it was expected. Mrs. Moore thought that, perhaps, the delivery had been made by mistake to her summer home at Greenwich, Conn. She telephoned to the caretaker there but received the reply, "No, there hasn't been any package left here."

Mrs. Moore then notified Balch, Price & Co. They questioned the messenger to whom the coat was entrusted for delivery. There have been two stories circulated as coming from that messenger.

One is that he was met near the Moore home by a woman who said she was a member of the family and would take charge of the coat. Another story is that a man met the bearer of the costly parcel almost at the entrance of the Fifth avenue house and got the coat by a similar story—that he was a member of the family. The business house that sold the fur, Mrs. Moore, and even the police who were endeavoring to trace the coat have remained exceedingly reticent, and exactly how the messenger was induced to part with his burden had not been made public by any one directly connected with the transaction. Mrs. Moore never has had anything to say regarding the loss of the coat, nor has she ever told publicly what sort of a coat it was or admitted that it was to cost her $25,000.

Frank T. Stack, a member of the firm of Balch, Price & Co., who lives in Brooklyn, was asked about the apparently well founded report of the coat's recovery.

"I haven't a thing to say about the matter," he replied.

At the Moore home it was said that Mrs. Moore was in Europe at this time and that she knew nothing about the coat being restored.

POLICE PUZZLED BY FIRE; HOUSE SOAKED WITH OIL

Bottle Half Full Is Found After Blaze Is Extinguished in Flatbush Home.

A fire, plainly of incendiary origin, which was discovered just after midnight this morning, blotting up the side of the two-family detached house at No. 323 Kenmore place, in the most exclusive residence district of Flatbush, is puzzling Fire Marshal Brophy and detectives from the Flatbush avenue station.

Mrs. Alphonse C. McCabe, who lives at No. 324 Flatbush avenue, in the rear of the Kenmore place house, discovered the blaze from her windows. The fire was sweeping up the shingled exterior of the house in the rear and had not roused the two families residing there. William F. Corlies, his wife and her sick mother, reside on the ground floor and Van G. Mable, his wife and two children occupy the upper story.

When the firemen had doused the fire they found the brick foundation still reeked of oil, and a milk bottle, half filled with oil, lay by the side of the house.

The building is owned by A. D. Williamson of No. 128 Kenmore place, and is valued at $20,000.

CHILDREN RIVAL BLOOMS AT PALACE FLOWER SHOW.

"Miladi," an "Utterly New Rose,"
Is to Be Feature To-Day at Fine Exhibition.

The International Flower Show at the New Grand Central Palace drew unusually large crowds at its opening. The social set was largely represented. There were many children present, and both the children and the flowers were beautiful to look at. The American Rose Society to-day will exhibit what is described as "an utterly new rose," called "The Miladi." It is from the garden of A. N. Pierson, Cromwell, Conn. Two thousand American Beauties will be staged. The awards in the regular classes were announced last evening. Exhibits from the greenhouses of John Wansmaker captured the blue ribbon for the Killarney class, dark pink Killarney and white Killarney roses. Each variety was represented by twelve blooms.

F. W. Vanderbilt won the class ribbon for any other variety with an entry of the Lady Alice Stanley, a pink rose. The Vanderbilt display also captured the prize for vase of twenty-five out blooms, any variety excepting American Beauties. In this class Mr. Wansmaker won second prize with a vase of Killarney roses.
